Anthony Warren, a local contractor, was working on a structure one day when he saw something he didn't like. He saw people acting with disregard toward a person who was down on his luck. He saw impoliteness. He saw a devaluing of human life.

What made it worse was that it was from a church.

Why do people who have no home also have no respect?

Anthony decided to do something about society's invisible men and women. And it started by grabbing a blanket and a bit of courage and going to sleep under the stars. Lying flat on his back on the concrete, his purpose suddenly got very clear.
