NICK Yates was riding in a vehicle down a dirt road in the hills of Haiti. He had just preached the Gospel to a group of Haitians and led many of them to make decisions for Christ.

The sun was hot. The bugs were out in force. He was tired. The festering and dangerous spider bites to his arm and leg were throbbing and hurting.

But none of that could make a dent in the joy he was feeling on this day. To think, just a few years before, he was convinced of his uselessness before God.
