All that would have to happen to keep the Billiards Ministry's dreams alive—of winning this match, then competing in the local Cities tournament, and ultimately, a return to the American Pool Association national championships in Las Vegas—would be for Amy Schweithelm, a new level three player, to beat the opponent's strong and veteran level four player. In other words, the chances of Amy winning were next to nothing. If there was any chance to return a Rock Church team to the APA's tournament in June, run by the world's largest amateur pool league, they had to have this win.

Trembling, Amy looked like she was about to step up to the plate in the bottom of the ninth inning during the seventh game of the World Series—without ever having swung a bat before.

"It's OK," said Mike McNeil, the Billiard's Ministry leader. "Just stay focused. Play your game and don't let the moment intimidate you." Mike's own heart was nearly pounding out of his chest. If Amy didn't win, Mike's last shooter would not only have to win his match, he would have to win in a 5-0 shutout against a level seven opponent—the highest there is. Again, it would be nearly impossible. Everything hinged on Amy.
