

LEIZL TOTARAM WITH AMY MUNDO

The Unending Gift

A college student’s prayer is answered in an unexpected way.

The cushioned seat in the dainty church felt unusually hard all of a sudden. I played through what I would say in my head like a movie reel clicking along. What I wanted to mention in my prayer request was that I was trying to move to San Diego for college to pursue fashion design. My family wasn’t able to afford tuition and as it turned out, we weren’t able to take out loans either. With the declining economy, my parents’ credit hindered us from having a loan without a cosigner. So, we asked close family and friends to cosign, but time after time, they were also unapproved either because of their credit or citizenship. We had been praying for months and tried everything we could.

On this particular Sunday, when the pastor finally asked if anybody had any prayer requests, I confidently shot up my hand. I stood up and shared, “So as many of you know, I’m supposed to be going to school in San Diego...” Tears suddenly began to stream down my face. I inhaled deeply but all confidence left me as I realized the gravity of my situation...
