

Be a Blessing

On Saturday, December 14th we are expecting more than 22,000 people at four Toys for Joy locations: Lincoln High School, Cajon Valley Middle School, Guajome Park Academy, and Castle Park High School.

Toys for Joy is an exciting day that thousands of families look forward to each year, some even line up the night before to ensure their spot in line. The morning kicks off as families enter into the Gospel stage area for an opportunity to receive Christ as their Savior and prayer. Next, families wind their way through a line of high fives and smiles up to the toy room, an area overflowing with thousands of toys.

It is through your generosity that last year almost 15,000 people - children and their families - participated in the toy experience. And the day doesn't stop at toys! Families are given bags of groceries, lunch, and clothing (at Lincoln site). Children and family members can get a fresh haircut and enjoy face painting, nail painting, kids activities and more.

Please join us in blessing San Diego families in need. Of the county's 3.2 million residents, 486,000 people face food insecurity every day. Of this number, 163,000 are children. Nearly 19 percent of San Diego County's children are living in poverty. Since 2006, there has been an increase of more than 94,000 people living on incomes below the poverty line, enough to fill two Petco Park Stadiums.

"More than ever, people need to step up and help those who are in need this year. Christmas is a time when God showed His love for us, and we're ready to show God's love in the communities where we live and serve. That's the purpose of the church."

FEATURED STORY

To Belong

By Lawrence A. Wood

In the early morning hours, the line continued to swell, snaking back and forth like a Disneyland entrance to a popular ride. Moving along the line, I met Christine and her sister Cynthia. Each brought their children and their friend's children. It was a common occurrence I was to learn. Struggling mothers were mindful of other struggling families and wanted to help. Cynthia was grateful for finally finding an apartment after five years of being homeless. She recognized the importance of the event for homeless parents and children, as well as single mothers. She was anticipating the joy her children would receive from a toy, but also for the hot dogs. Her kids love hot dogs.

As our conversation continued, her sister, Christine, found it "amazing that so many people would spend the time to give and not get paid." I asked how it made her feel, and she said it made her recognize there are people who really care.

Throughout the grounds there were huge signs welcoming everyone to Toys for Joy. However, just below those towering words was the slogan, "It's More Than a Toy." What was "the More"? Everyone I spoke with possessed a giving spirit. Parents bringing other children than their own. Volunteers waiting to see the excitement in the children's eyes. Rock Church members eager to tell their story in order to reach someone and let them know they were not alone in their struggle. There was an answer, for pain.

Everyone was helping others and it became clear, and I wish everyone knew that it is impossible to help someone and not be helped yourself. In helping others, we let them know they belong. A loving God made it so.
