FEATURED STORY

TENFOLD

PART ONE

A miracle in the lobby of Rock Church

When Marvin met his fiancé, she was so lovely and gracious, it wasn't long before thoughts of forever started entering his mind. When he popped the question and she said yes, it began one of the best and worst times in his life. Preparations for the wedding ceremony revealed a part of his life that was a giant, painful hole—and it was only getting worse.

Marvin's beloved mother had passed away a few years earlier, and therefore wouldn't be in the place of honor next to Marvin on his special day. Neither would his dad, who had never been a part of Marvin's life and was serving a life sentence for being a repeat drug offender. Marvin knew he would never see him again. Marvin's grandmother, who had helped raise him, had recently passed away. When he asked his favorite aunt, she gave an enthusiastic yes. Five days later, she had a stroke.

He envisioned an empty pew at the front of the church. It would say to the world that he was alone. That is why when his fiancé asked for the credit card to make a larger-than-normal tithe, Marvin was desperate to stop the feeling of yet another out-of-control-moment—and said no.

Later, Marvin heard the doors click and open. It was his fiancé. "Marvin!" she said, trying to catch her breath. "You're not going to believe this. Your dad is here at church...."
